Organisational / managerial skills

- Head, since 2005, of the Bioinformatics infrastructure (database and computer server management) at CNR-ITB, Bari institute. I supervise a technician devoted to the system management activities. The CNR-ITB Bari Bioinformatics infrastructure is composed of various servers and clusters, each devoted to a particular task such as HPC/HTC computational servers, database and web/web-service servers, for the dissemination to the scientific community of bioinformatics tools (database and software) developed by the ITB-Bari research unit personnel and collaborators. In detail, the server infrastructure consists of more than 100 CPU-core (including 2 Tesla GPUs for CUDA applications), approximately 1,2 TB RAM and more than 80TB of disk space, in 3 servers and 2 clusters.
- Team leader for the "design and development of biological database and systems for data-integration" group.
- Member of various commissions for the purchase and testing of scientific, mainly informatics, equipments

Job-related skills

Since 1994 I'm involved in Bioinformatics in the Bari Bioinformatics Group, headed by Prof. C.Saccone. Within the group, my research activities have developed into the following topics: design, development, implementation and maintenance of biological databases and data-warehouses; management and integration of large amounts of biological data (BigData); development of bioinformatics analysis pipelines, mainly focused on NGS data; development of WEB interfaces for bioinformatics software and pipelines; Computer Server management and network management; management of (bio)informatics infrastructure.
- Participation in more than 20 Italian and European research projects since 1996. In particular, Principal Investigator for the CNR-ITB-Bari in the following research projects:
